Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study
Summary of October 2021 Open Houses

Grand Prairie: Tuesday, October 12, 2021 from 5:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. CDT

Fort Worth: Tuesday, October 19, 2021 from 4:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. CDT

Dallas: Tuesday, October 26, 2021 from 4:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. CDT

Arlington: Saturday, October 30, 2021 from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. CDT

As part of ongoing public outreach initiatives for the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study, the North Central Texas Council of Governments (NCTCOG) held four in-person open houses. Open houses were held to get communities up-to-date on the study, whether attendees had participated in Phase 1 virtual public meetings or were learning about the study for the first time. The study team hoped to raise public interest, provided a summary of the Phase 1 process and results, and continued to bring awareness of the project as the project advances to Phase 2. The series of open houses were held in the four cities along the corridor alignment in proximity to those communities with the most potential to be impacted. The open houses were hosted by NCTCOG at Lone Star Park in Grand Prairie, Southside Preservation Hall in Fort Worth, Mercy Street Dallas, and Globe Life Field in Arlington. At each open house, attendees received a study overview and update (including the Phase 1 screening results and the alignments and technologies recommended to be analyzed further in Phase 2.) Attendees could speak with project staff and provide comments on the study.

To ensure the safety of everyone during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, safety measures in accordance with public health guidance were in place. All venues were large enough to accommodate social distancing measures. Masks, while optional, were available for all attendees; hand sanitizer was available at multiple stations; and QR codes were available to sign in and comment virtually to reduce the number of surfaces touched by attendees. Figure 1 illustrates the Grand Prairie open house. Additional photos are available in Appendix A.

NCTCOG published a notice of the open houses in a local Vietnamese newspaper, Trẻ Dallas. The print advertisement was translated into Vietnamese for targeted outreach to that community due to the high population of Vietnamese speakers along the corridor. The series of open houses was also covered by Dallas Innovates, Fort Worth Business, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, GovTech, CBS DFW, Fort Worth Inc, and Rambler Newspapers. Documentation of the print advertisement and print news coverage are located in Appendix B.

A news release describing the meetings and study, included in Appendix B, was distributed by NCTCOG on October 5, 2021 to 95 local media outlets. Flyer meeting notices in English and Spanish were emailed to 3,582 community members and stakeholders on October 6, 2021. Postcard meeting notices were mailed to 11,270 community members and stakeholders on September 30 and October 1, 2021. Graphics raising awareness of the open houses were posted on the NCTCOG Transportation Department social media channels. The first social media graphic posted for the open house series by NCTCOG is shown in Figure 2. Other graphics, accompanying text, and analytics regarding the public meetings are included in Appendix B.

Further outreach about the project and mentions of the public meetings occurred through a quarterly newsletter, DFW High-Speed Update, launched February 2021. The newsletter is distributed by email to everyone on the project contact list, which includes 3,582 community members and stakeholders. It focuses on the latest updates on project progress and upcoming events for the public to attend. The latest quarterly newsletter from September is included in Appendix B. The project team also raised awareness of the open houses through targeted outreach by email to community groups along the Phase 1 recommended alignment corridors and provided information about the upcoming open houses to share with their members.

In addition to information about the open houses, materials such as exhibits and presentations in English and Spanish were posted on the study website on October 13, 2021 after the first open house in Grand Prairie. Handouts included Level 1 Screening results, Level 2 Screening results, and Level 3 Screening results printed in English and Spanish, as well as copies of the presentation printed in Spanish. These handouts were also posted to the project website. Videos of the presentation and technologies were played continuously at the meetings in both English and Spanish and were also closed captioned for those with hearing disabilities. Each of these materials are included in Appendix D. Additionally, documents with general information regarding the study, facts on high-speed transportation technology, evaluation criteria used to assess alternatives, and updated frequently asked questions about the study were posted on the study website. This provided an additional opportunity for information from those individuals who could not attend the in-person open houses. A screenshot of the study website where the study information was posted is shown in Figure 3.

At each open house, attendees were asked upon arrival to place a dot sticker on a “Knowledge Meter” board to represent how much they knew about the DFW High-Speed Transportation Connections Study. After placing the dot sticker on the “Knowledge Meter,” attendees proceeded to view the meeting material and watch the presentations. Before leaving the open house, attendees were asked to place a second dot sticker on a separate “Knowledge Meter” board to gauge how much they had learned after viewing the materials and speaking with project staff. Completed “Knowledge Meter” exhibit boards from each of the four open houses are depicted in Figures 4 through 11.

NCTCOG offered reasonable accommodations, including translation services, in all open house notifications. NCTCOG did not receive any requests for accommodations or translations.

Throughout these four open houses, a total of 114 people attended in person. Specifically, 13 people attended the Grand Prairie Open House at Lone Star Park, 22 people attended the Fort Worth Open House at Southside Preservation Hall, 23 people attended the Dallas Open House at Mercy Street Dallas, and 56 people attended the Arlington Open House at Globe Life Field. One elected official attended the Dallas Open House, Councilman Omar Narvaez of Dallas.

Comments for the open house series were collected through a general online comment form and by hand-written comments from the open house meetings. A screenshot of the online comment form from the Grand Prairie Open House is shown in Figure 12.

NCTCOG Hosting In-Person High-Speed Transportation Open Houses in October

Meetings will present an overview of Phase 1 recommendations

October 5, 2021 (Arlington, Texas) — The North Central Texas Council of Governments will hold a series of in-person open houses throughout the region in October to highlight the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study's purpose as well as the Phase 1 recommendations of the project.

The first open house is scheduled for 5 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 12 at Lone Star Park in Grand Prairie. Open houses are also scheduled for 4 p.m. Oct. 19 at Southside Preservation Hall in Fort Worth, 4 p.m., Oct. 26 at Mercy Street in west Dallas and 10 a.m. Oct. 30 at Globe Life Field in Arlington. Large venues have been chosen to allow for adequate social distancing.

There will be a short video on a loop discussing the project and presentation boards throughout each venue that will explain the different high-speed technologies and recommended route. The open houses are intended to promote interaction between residents and the project team while providing an overview of the Phase I recommendations.

The study is evaluating high-speed transportation alternatives to modernize and enhance travel between Dallas, Arlington and Fort Worth. The alternatives analysis portion of this study is in its final stages before the federal environmental documentation process begins. Planners have recommended a route along the Interstate Highway 30 corridor and two potential technologies for further study. Both high-speed rail and hyperloop technologies are being considered.

The high-speed transportation study team considered more than 40 possible alignments in a 230-square-mile area during Phase 1 of the project. The most direct and least disruptive route for connecting downtown Dallas and downtown Fort Worth, with a stop in Arlington, was determined to be along IH 30.

The selected high-speed technology would provide connections with local transportation systems and link to future high-speed services, such as the Dallas-to-Houston high-speed rail line being developed by Texas Central. The Fort Worth-to-South Texas corridor is also being studied for a potential high-speed option.

Each open house location will offer free parking nearby. Comments will be accepted in person and online at www.nctcog.org/dfw-hstcs.

Will Dallas-Fort Worth Get Its Own HyperLoop or Bullet Train Line? Open Houses Take Us One Step Closer

A transportation study team is exploring a potential high-speed Dallas-Arlington-Fort Worth rail line along the I-30 corridor. The North Central Texas Council of Governments is holding open house presentations on the project—which could ultimately lead to a bullet train or hyperloop whizzing us between the cities.

BY DAVID SEELEY (HTTPS://DALLASINNOVATES.COM/AUTHOR/DAVID-SEELEY/) • OCT 14, 2021

[Image: andrey_l/Shutterstock]

Note: This story was updated on October 16, 2021, with additional images, more information about the Dallas high-speed station, and other details.

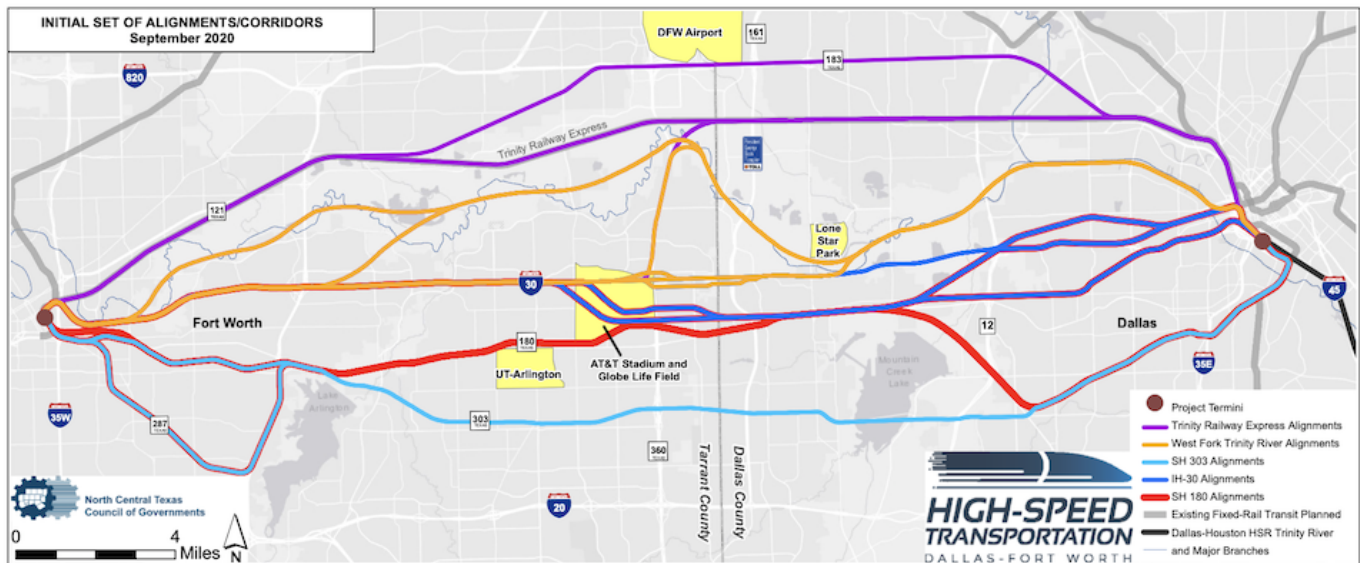

It's 5:15 p.m. on Thursday, October 14. Google Maps says it will take 50 minutes to drive from downtown Dallas to downtown Fort Worth. Public transport via the Trinity Railway express train takes 56 minutes. If you're thinking "there's gotta be a faster way," then we've got an open house for you.

The North Central Texas Council of Governments (NCTCOG) is holding open house presentations on its study of a proposed high-speed rail line between Dallas and Fort Worth (<https://www.nctcog.org/trans/plan/transit-management-and-planning/general-public-information/transit-planning-activities/transit-planning-projects/high-speed-rail/dfw-high-speed-transportation-connections-study>). In coming years it could ultimately lead to a bullet train or a hyperloop whizzing us between the cities, with a quick stop in Arlington along the way.

Goals of the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study

The 36-month study began in May 2020 and is being conducted by the NCTCOG in cooperation with the Federal Railroad Administration and the Federal Transit Administration. Its goals are selecting a passenger technology; identifying potential alignments/routes; and receiving federal environmental approval.

Once that's achieved, the project can move on to the harder stuff: securing funding, detailing the design, acquiring right-of-way, and beginning construction.

Initial Dallas Fort Worth Corridors and Alignments Sept 2020 [Image: NCTCOG]

Where would the high-speed line go?

As you can see above, the project study team explored a lot of corridors and alignments. The initial set included a route along Highway 180 that lined up with AT&T Stadium, Globe Life Field, and UT Arlington. Other options swooped northward along Highway 183 and to the south along Spur 303.

But last May, the study team narrowed its recommendations to what you see below: a three-station, one-seat ride along the I-30 corridor between Beckley Avenue in Dallas and Beach Street in Fort Worth. “The most direct and least disruptive route for connecting Downtown Dallas and Downtown Fort Worth with a stop in Arlington was determined to be along I-30,” the NCTCOG said.

Recommended Phase I Alignments May 2021 [Image: NCTCOG]

Didn't I hear about another bullet train in Dallas?

Yes, that would be the planned Texas Central bullet train line between Dallas and Houston. We've written recently about Texas Central's $16 billion design-build contract (<https://dallasinnovates.com/texas-central-signs-16b-design-build-contract-for-its-historic-high-speed-train/>) and how Spain's Renfe has been signed (<https://dallasinnovates.com/texas-central-signs-up-spains-renfe-as-early-operator-of-high-speed-dallas-houston-railway/>) to be the operator. But the Dallas-Fort Worth high-speed line is a different project.

The Dallas-Arlington-Fort Worth line could link to future high-speed services, like the Texas Central line and the Fort Worth-to-South Texas corridor, which is also being studied for a potential high-speed option:

Phase 2 begins

On July 8, the NCTCOG's Regional Transportation Council approved moving into the second phase of the study, which will further explore the I-30 corridor and the high-speed rail and hyperloop options. The study team will also develop plans for operations and service, prepare preliminary engineering, and compile environmental documentation.

Very fast. The NCTCOG study team eliminated two slower options: conventional rail (80 MPH max) and “higher-speed” rail like Amtrak’s Northeast Acela line (125 MPH max).

Here are the two recommended options. Hold on to your hat:

The high-speed bullet train would have a maximum speed of 250 miles per hour. New, exclusive tracks would have to be built for it. It would run on a fixed schedule similar to how high-speed trains run now in Europe and Asia, including Japan’s Shinkansen service (<https://www.jrailpass.com/shinkansen-bullet-trains>). A bullet train project like those is currently under construction in California (<https://hsr.ca.gov>) between San Francisco and the Los Angeles basin.

[Image: NCTCOG]

The hyperloop has an even faster maximum speed of 650 miles per hour. New, elevated hyperloop tubes would have to be built. But unlike bullet trains, a hyperloop could be used on an unscheduled, on-demand basis, with only two minutes needed between two trains or “pods.”

In a hyperloop, passenger-carrying pods accelerate through an extremely low-pressure tube, gaining the ability to approach the speed of sound. Here’s a great look at the proposed technology (<https://brilliant.org/wiki/hyperloop/>).

On the other hand—unlike high-speed trains which have been in operation for several decades—hyperloop technology is still only in the prototype testing stage. But that hasn’t stopped the NCTCOG team from recommending hyperloop as an option.

“While it is not proven at this time, by the beginning of construction on this project, it is anticipated that hyperloop technology would likely be ready for service,” the NCTCOG study team says.

A caveat on the speed

Even with the hyperloop, you wouldn’t be zooming at 650 MPH from start to finish. That’s just the maximum possible speed of the potential technology. A stop in Arlington makes the distance traveled between stations relatively short, so there must be time for safe acceleration, deceleration, and onboarding and offboarding.

The NCTCOG says that even on an express, nonstop run between Dallas and Fort Worth, the goal is simply to make the trip “in under 20 minutes.” That would still cut around 40 minutes off a rush-hour car ride.

“The goal is to provide a reliable service that takes less time to travel between Fort Worth and Dallas, which can typically take up to an hour in a car during peak periods,” the NCTCOG said in a recent DFW High-Speed Update newsletter.

“Technology and alignment alternatives with express service in under 20 minutes between Dallas and Fort Worth are being considered.”

Where would the stations be?

In Dallas, a new rail station for the high-speed Dallas-Arlington-Fort Worth line would be built near and tie into the proposed Texas Central bullet train station, just south of the Dallas Convention Center in the Cedars neighborhood. Two potential Dallas station sites are shown below in orange, north and south of the orange Texas Central station location.

Conceptual Locations of Dallas High Speed Station for NCTCOG DFW line, to be tied into the proposed new station for the Texas Central Dallas-to-Houston bullet train. [Conceptual Image: NCTCOG]

In Fort Worth, the study team's primary proposed location is Trinity Metro's existing Central Station along I-35W downtown. But six other downtown-area sites are also being explored.

For the midpoint Arlington stop, three potential station locations are being explored between Six Flags Over Texas and Collins Street.

The study team may also consider an alternate, intermediate station location based on specific alignment and technology requirements.

Will the rail line be elevated, in tunnels, or on tracks on a grade?

"Given the dense urban environment between Dallas and Fort Worth, the high-speed technology chosen (either high-speed rail or hyperloop) is expected to be grade-separated for a majority if not the entire length of the corridor," the NCTCOG's Brian Wilson told us.

So most, if not all, of the high-speed line between Dallas and Fort Worth will be elevated above ground. The expensive cost of tunneling makes this option more economical.

[Image: NCTCOG]

When can we take a ride?

Not anytime soon. The initial three-year study is scheduled through May 2023. If the project moves forward, it will take years to secure funding, acquire right-of-way, build the needed stations, and construct the high-speed rail line or hyperloop.

What can I see at the open house?

At the NCTCOG open houses, a short video playing on a loop will offer an overview of the project. Presentation boards throughout each venue will explain the different high-speed technologies and offer a closer look at the recommended route.

Attendees will be able to interact with the project team while getting a good sense of all the Phase I recommendations. If you have comments about the project, they will be accepted in person at the open house, or you can make them online here (<https://www.nctcog.org/trans/plan/transit-management-and-planning/general-public-information/transit-planning-activities/transit-planning-projects/high-speed-rail/dfw-high-speed-transportation-connections-study>).

When/where are the open houses?

The free, in-person open houses are being held in large venues to allow for social distancing. The first one was held Tuesday at Lone Star Park in Grand Prairie.

The next open house will be in Fort Worth from 4 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 19, at Southside Preservation Hall at 1519 Lipscomb St.

The Dallas open house will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 26, at Mercy Street Dallas, 3801 Holystone St.

Finally, the Arlington open house will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 30, at Globe Life Field at 734 Stadium Drive.

Each location will offer free parking nearby.

The North Central Texas Council of Governments will hold a series of in-person open houses throughout the region in October to highlight the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study's purpose as well as the Phase 1 recommendations of the project.

Open houses are scheduled for 4 p.m. Oct. 19 at Southside Preservation Hall in Fort Worth, 4 p.m., Oct. 26 at Mercy Street in west Dallas and 10 a.m. Oct. 30 at Globe Life Field in Arlington. Large venues have been chosen to allow for adequate social distancing.

There will be a short video on a loop discussing the project and presentation boards throughout each venue that will explain the different high-speed technologies and recommended route. The open houses are intended to promote interaction between residents and the project team while providing an overview of the Phase I recommendations.

The study is evaluating high-speed transportation alternatives to modernize and enhance travel between Dallas, Arlington and Fort Worth. The alternatives analysis portion of this study is in its final stages before the federal environmental documentation process begins.

Planners have recommended a route along the Interstate Highway 30 corridor and two potential technologies for further study. Both high-speed rail and hyperloop technologies are being considered.

The high-speed transportation study team considered more than 40 possible alignments in a 230-square-mile area during Phase 1 of the project. The most direct and least disruptive route for connecting downtown Dallas and downtown Fort Worth, with a stop in Arlington, was determined to be along IH 30.

The selected high-speed technology would provide connections with local transportation systems and link to future high-speed services, such as the Dallas-to-Houston high-speed rail line being developed by Texas Central. The Fort Worth-to-South Texas corridor is also being studied for a potential high-speed option.

Each open house location will offer free parking nearby. Comments will be accepted in person and online at www.nctcog.org/dfw-hstcs

TRAFFIC & TRANSPORTATION

Fort Worth to Dallas in 20 minutes? Here's the plan for rapid transit in North Texas

BY JESS HARDIN

UPDATED OCTOBER 21, 2021 9:33 AM

A hyperloop vehicle is on display during a media tour at Spain Pavilion at the Dubai Expo. The high-speed transit system might one day link Dallas and Fort Worth.

Getting to Dallas might take about 20 minutes, according to a study on high-speed transit.

The North Central Texas Council of Governments, with the help of engineering firm HNTB, spent a year answering the question: What would high-speed transit in the Metroplex look like?

The team came up with a proposal to run high-speed transit along the Interstate 30 corridor and narrowed possible technologies to high-speed rail or the hyperloop, a system of tubes through which a vehicle can travel almost without friction.

The team has been sharing the results of the first phase of its $15 million study at public meetings throughout North Texas.

“We can’t just build our way out of congestion,” said Brandon Wheeler, principal transportation manager at the Council of Governments. “We can’t just add lanes to freeways.”

LINKING FORT WORTH AND DALLAS

In the past year, authors of the study evaluated 43 routes connecting Fort Worth, Arlington and Dallas. They determined the I-30 corridor was the most direct and least disruptive.

The study also evaluated five train technologies and identified high-speed rail and hyperloop, which have similar infrastructure characteristics.

High-speed trains, already in use throughout Europe and Asia, and can travel up to 250 mph. The hyperloop is expected to reach 650 mph.

downtown areas,” featuring hotels, apartments, restaurants, offices and retail, Lamers said.

“The development that will be able to occur around the stations is immense,” Lamers said. “These are stations that are the size of airport terminals ... They’re able to be built in a downtown urban environment.”

These stations will be critical because the high-speed Metroplex connector could link to other high-speed transit projects, like the Dallas-Houston high-speed rail line being developed by Texas Central. If TxDOT’s Texas-Oklahoma Passenger Rail Study comes to fruition, it would connect here, too.

Ideally, this network of high-speed transit will connect the 80% of Texans living in or near the state’s five largest cities.

“You’ll be able to, without a second thought, go from Fort Worth to Houston to see an Astros game and not have to worry about finding a place to stay overnight,” Lamers said.

Ultimately, with the inclusion of DFW Airport, the Metroplex could be “the gateway to Texas from the world,” Lamers said. And vice versa.

TRANSIT STUDY, PART TWO

The project is about 15 to 20 years from completion, said Lamers.

The authors have hosted more than 130 public meetings.

“It’s been our philosophy to involve folks early and often,” Wheeler said. “We don’t want to get somewhere along the way, where someone says, ‘Hey, how didn’t I know about this?’”

Public engagement will continue in the study’s next phase. You can sign up to receive meeting notifications and project updates at nctcog.org.

The second phase of the study will navigate some of the more challenging regulatory requirements for the project, like the National Environmental Protection Act.

This process “will consider the impacts to any group you can think of,” said HNTB Deputy Project Manager Chris Masters.

During the second phase, expected to last about two years, the team will develop financial and project management plans.

So, will this project actually come to fruition?

“I think it can,” said Masters. “It just requires some money.”

DALLAS (CBSDFW.COM) – The North Central Texas Council of Governments (NCTCOG) has spent the past year developing a high speed public transit study, that examines a possible non-highway transportation artery between Dallas and Fort Worth.

The DFW High-Speed Transportation Connections Study examines various methods of possible mass transit tied to high speed capability.

Under the study, analysts are now proposing a direct high speed transit system along I-30 between downtown Dallas and downtown Fort Worth.

The line would not be viable for at least a decade or longer.

“We’re talking about a high speed transportation mode that will go between Dallas and Fort Worth, and also connect with the high speed rail planned for Houston to Dallas,” NCTCOG Senior Program Manager Dan Lamers said Thursday, Oct. 21.

The mode of transit proposed currently, includes high speed trains, capable of speeds beyond 200 mph.

NCTCOG officials also highlighted the emerging transportation technology known as a hyperloop.

A hyperloop would possibly be able to transport riders via “cargo pods”, moving people at speeds at three times the rate of a high speed train.

NCTCOG sites research on future DFW population, along with projections for highway use, as indicators for creating a high speed system along the I-30 freeway that connects Fort Worth and Dallas. Officials also emphasize, the train or hyperloop would be part of the planned network of high speed transportation proposed for the Dallas region.

Work continues for a high speed rail train that would provide service between Dallas and Houston.

“This will help those coming into DFW from out of town, in particular, to be able to travel to the central part of the region, Dallas or Ft. Worth, in a more efficient manner,” Lamers said. “The

NCTCOG to Host Open House Sharing Progress of High-Speed Rail Study

The North Central Texas Council of Governments is conducting studies for a potential high-speed rail in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

There's one last chance to take a closer look at the North Central Texas Council of Governments' (NCTCOG) study on the proposed high-speed rail coming to the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

NCTCOG will conclude its series of open houses showcasing the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study on Saturday. Taking place at Globe Life Field in Arlington from 10 a.m. – 2 p.m., the event will allow attendees to view possible station locations, route alignment, and technology for the proposed high-speed transit line that would run between Dallas and Fort Worth and stop in Arlington-Grand Prairie.

NCTCOG is currently in Phase Two of the study, analyzing potential routes between the cities, with a stop in Arlington; evaluating potential vehicles; developing plans for operations and service; preparing preliminary engineering; and compiling environmental documentation. According to NCTCOG, the purpose of the second phase is to gain federal approval of the route alignment and vehicle technology.

Phase One identified potential vehicles and route alignment, narrowing down the potential technology to high-speed rail and hyperloop (eliminating conventional rail and higher-speed rail) and proposing a route that would run along Interstate 30 between Beckley Avenue in Dallas and Beach Street in Fort Worth. The Regional Transportation Council approved Phase One recommendations on July 8.

Potential station locations include Fort Worth's Central Station (identified as priority by NCTCOG according to a study three years ago) and others around downtown. In Arlington, stations are being considered for the entertainment district.

The selected high-speed technology would provide connections with local transportation systems and link to future high-speed services, such as the Dallas-to-Houston high-speed rail line being developed by Texas Central, according to NCTCOG. The Fort Worth-to-South Texas corridor is also being studied for a potential high-speed option.

The community can make comments during the event and also submit comments online at nctcog.org/dfw-hstcs.

HIGH-SPEED TRANSPORTATION CONNECTIONS STUDY

Phase 2 of Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study (HSTCS) Now Underway for connecting Downtown Dallas and Downtown Fort Worth with a stop in Arlington was determined to be along I-30.

Phase 2 of the HSTCS kicks off with a collaborative process among stakeholders and numerous government agencies studying the I-30 corridor and the functionality of high-speed rail (HSR) and hyperloop. The HSTCS team studied 43 possible alignments in Phase 1 in a 230-square-mile area. The most direct and least disruptive route

Additional high-speed options are expected to accommodate the region's exponential growth and provide residents with safe, reliable and efficient travel. The study's final recommendation is expected to provide connections with local transportation systems and link to future high-speed services.

Locations Studied for High-Speed Fort Worth Station

Trinity Metro's existing Central Station appears to be the first priority for the Downtown Fort Worth station, according to a study completed by NCTCOG three years ago. However, other possible locations are being reviewed again in Phase 2 of the current study.

"Our study team is looking once again at what location meets the newest criteria for selection of the Fort Worth station," said Chris Masters, PE, Associate Vice President, HNTB, the engineering group for the study. "Given our Phase 1 conclusions and recommendations, we will factor how best to maximize speed with the least turns required when coming into this western station on the anticipated I-30 alignment," he continued.

The location of the Dallas station has already been confirmed, as the team looks to tie into the planned Texas Central station, south of the Dallas Convention Center.

will be conducted, along with conceptual and preliminary engineering, financial analysis, and planning for project management.

Understanding Restrictions

Design begins by setting the alignment considering the characteristics of both technologies and fully recognizing the restrictions posed by residential, commercial, and industrial developments; the existing transportation infrastructure; and wetlands. “We are trying to stay within existing transportation rights-of-way where reasonable and maintain the straightest alignments possible to maximize design speeds throughout the corridor,” explains Chris Masters, PE, Associate Vice President, HNTB, the engineering group for the study.

“Collaboration is paramount. We are working with the cities of Dallas, Fort Worth, Arlington, and Grand Prairie, the Fort Worth and Dallas Districts of the Texas Department of Transportation, North Texas Tollway Authority, Trinity Metro, DART, Union Pacific and Burlington Northern Santa Fe Class 1 Railroads,” Masters emphasizes. “Integrated into our planning will be future infrastructure development such as the interchanges at SH 360 and the President George Bush Turnpike.”

Comparing Technologies

The horizontal alignment geometry between HSR and hyperloop is similar – mostly driven by physical restrictions rather than by the capabilities of the technology.

Vertically, there is significant difference between the capabilities of both. A desirable maximum grade for HSR is a slope of around 2%. Hyperloop is designed to operate at a much steeper grade, with a slope of around 10%. The characteristics of each technology will impact height obstructions or restrictions along the proposed corridor.

Once the alignment is refined for each technology, the location and configuration of the mid-point station in Arlington will likewise be refined. Stations function differently for both technologies, requiring different footprints, configurations, and orientations to the track. While HSR station platforms must align parallel and adjacent to main line tracks, hyperloop tubes carry pods off the main line for docking at a station that may be located outside the high-speed transportation guideway.

Further comparison is given to the electrification system as it can affect the vertical clearance required throughout the corridor for each technology. HSR technology uses overhead wiring infrastructure for electrification. These components are incorporated inside the tube structure for hyperloop, reducing overhead conflicts that could otherwise restrict the vertical alignment of the corridor.

NCTCOG’s Transportation Department Strives to Maintain a Sustainable Quality of Life for All

The needs of residents and businesses vary greatly across the North Central Texas region. Mobility has a significant impact on quality of life, allowing people to live where they want; to access jobs, education, and healthcare; and engage in enjoyable cultural and recreational activities. Mobility also influences the region’s economic vitality and appeal, being responsible for moving goods from producers to consumers.

National Recognition

The region’s complexities require a coordinated effort to plan and administer programs that will not only ensure its livability but also improve the area as it continues to grow exponentially. Transportation challenges are among the most perplexing confronting everyone—and the North Central Texas Council of Governments (NCTCOG) has been grappling with them for decades.

As the largest federally-designated Metropolitan Planning Organization (MPO) in the U.S., NCTCOG and its Regional Transportation Council (RTC), serve as the transportation policy body for this 12-county area. The RTC works closely with regional, state, and federal partners to plan and recommend transportation projects to improve mobility and encourage more efficient land use.

Major products produced by NCTCOG include a long-range Metropolitan Transportation Plan (MTP), a shorter-term Transportation Improvement Program (TIP), a Congestion Management Process (CMP), and a Unified Planning Work Program (UPWP).

Among the higher profile studies now underway in the MTP’s Mobility 2045 Plan is the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study (DFWHSTCS), now entering Phase 2 which includes preliminary design and environmental assessments.

Years of Planning

Already having contributed to significant data and findings for further consideration in this study are numerous projects within the Mobility 2040 Plan and adopted by the RTC in 2016. These include recommendations for high-speed passenger service in four corridors: Oklahoma City to

South Texas, Fort Worth to Shreveport, Fort Worth to Dallas, and Dallas to Houston. Although the plan does not specify an exact route for high-speed rail (HSR), it includes policies related to its development and planning in the Dallas-Fort Worth region. Important to note is the recommendation to establish a HSR-system interoperability resulting in a “one seat ride” system operation to, through, and within the North Central Texas region.

Texas Central Railroad (TCR), a private entity, is currently developing a HSR system to operate between downtown Dallas and Houston utilizing the Shinkansen N700 series rolling stock and system technology. Another passenger rail study (TOPRS) is an evaluation being conducted by the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) for an 850-mile corridor of higher-speed rail service between Oklahoma City to the north through the Dallas-Fort Worth region, Austin, and San Antonio to destinations in south Texas including Laredo, Corpus Christi, and Brownsville.

It is important to note these HSR efforts are unfolding independently on varying schedules and timelines and will potentially employ different rolling stock and system technologies. They may operate independent from one another under different operating scenarios and service schedules.

Sustainable Development

As land uses influence regional travel patterns and demands, land uses should be planned in conjunction with transportation systems. NCTCOG supports sustainable development—mixed use, multi-purpose projects, in-fill construction, and transit-oriented developments that reduce vehicle miles traveled, enable the use of alternative modes of transportation, promote economic development, and improve air quality.

Air Quality

High-speed transportation connections are an important component in the region’s efforts to push the area into the federal government’s air quality attainment boundaries.

While NCTCOG has a primary goal of reaching ozone attainment for air quality, many air quality efforts reduce particulate matter and greenhouse gas emissions and support efforts to improve air quality comprehensively. Air quality improvement strategies can be broken down by audience type including efforts for local governments, vehicle fleets, transportation modes, etc.

Fall Open Houses: Fun-Filled Learning Opportunities

COMMUNITY UPDATE

The public is encouraged to come together in person to talk with project leads on the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study’s purpose as well as the proposed I-30 alignment and two technology modes.

“We are hosting four casual come-and-go events, one each in Dallas, Fort Worth, Grand Prairie and Arlington,” said Dan Lamers, PE, the NCTCOG Senior Program Manager serving as project manager for the study. “The locations are fun, wide-open spaces; families are encouraged to come.”

Locations, addresses, and times will be announced in early September, with the events occurring in October. The schedule will be promoted using social media, and it will be posted on the project website at nctcog.org/dfw-hstcs.

NAACP Participates in DFW HSTCS, Asking Questions and Offering Comments

When the Arlington Branch of the NAACP learned about the NCTCOG-sponsored DFW High-Speed Transportation Connections Study, its leadership immediately reached out to schedule a public presentation. The project team responded enthusiastically and scheduled a presentation where information and opinions were shared in a virtual meeting format.

“Transportation improvements are imperative for our region’s livability,” said Alisa Simmons, branch president. “Public engagement is one of the NAACP’s guiding principles, and we will continue to be involved as a community advocate as the study moves forward.”

NCTCOG always encourages project stakeholders and the public to become involved. “Collaboration and cooperation are important in shaping an initiative that benefits the greater community,” says Rebekah Hernandez, NCTCOG Communications Manager. “We welcome the opportunity to make presentations to business and community groups to outline the status of the project and continue to hear the public’s opinions.”

Upholding environmental justice and strengthening community resilience describe the NAACP’s mission. Members work to ensure communities are equipped to engage in sustainability and climate action planning that integrates policies and practices on advancing food justice, advocating for transportation equity, and upholding civil and human rights.

We are anticipating the project will include three stations – one near the existing Fort Worth Central Station (north of I-30); a second one in Arlington near the Entertainment District; and a third connecting to the proposed high-speed rail station at Cadiz Street/Riverfront Boulevard (south of I-30) in Dallas. |

| 3 | 10/15/2021 | Bradley Smith | 75225 | Other | Online - not collected at meeting, general comment form | Connecting Downtown Fort Worth and Dallas with a high-speed option is vital for the region and is something that would greatly benefit the economies. But I'm worried that it will be done in all the wrong ways if not thought through properly. Hyperloop is not the way they should be connected for a multitude of reasons. Hyperloop, a theoretical type of transportation, has yet to prove its capacity, its speed, even its technology (the premise of hyperloops has evolved from vacuum-tube maglevs to pneumatic-tube fan-trains; no full-scale test tracks have even been constructed to test the varying technologies and types). There is also the issue of distance between the two cities. Even if hyperloop was a working technology, a line of only ~32mi is much too short to justify the spending for such a high-speed option. A naïve assumption would be that travelling at 300mph would cross the gap in 6min, but that assumes an instantaneous 0-300 from the station. It is suggested that the limit for "comfortable" acceleration for humans is somewhere around 0.9m/s² (equivalent to about 2mph per second)--real life high-speed passenger trains accelerate even slower than this at ~1/3-2/3mph per second (http://www.railway-technical.com/books-papers--articles/high-speed-railway-capacity.pdf). Even at 2mph/s, it would take 2.5min to reach full speed, and you would have covered 6.25mi. The same calculation goes for decelerating on the other side, leaving ~20mi of full speed overhyped loop and a total travel time of 9-10min. And the real goal for hyperloops is somewhere in the 600-800mph range, which would never happen; the hypothetical top speed for this route would be ~480mph if everything went perfect and it were accelerating and decelerating like a bat-outta...well. (If we go with the max comfortable acceleration of a train @2/3mph/s, then top speed would be ~277mph with a total trip time of ~14min). All these figures are made even more depressing once you begin to figure in a stop midway in Arlington (<200mph maximum in 10min with the reasonable figures assuming 16mi track from either terminus or ~6min with 340mph maximum using the unreasonable figures). The last point I will make is about connectivity. With the Texas Central Railway essentially confirming construction will soon start on the Houston-Dallas route, a connection from the Dallas station to Ft. Worth from the station is vital. One of the better options I believe would be to plan out an extension for the railway to Ft. Worth. It would allow the city to be easily integrated into any other future expansions of the HSR system that could not only connect it to Dallas and Houston, but also to the nation as a whole. The soon-to-start TCR will have the high-speed capability needed for the route without being complete overkill as described above (who cares if it might take a couple minutes longer? 20min for the trip instead of an untested "maybe 14 at best"? We've already seen how inflated hyperloop's real times would become above). An alternative to that would be a different kind of extension to DART--more akin to the TRE. As of now, the TRE takes a bit more than an hour to travel its full route, but with only one midway station and ability to plan straighter routes, this new line could become a much faster alternative to TRE. Though not as fast as a possible high-speed option, it's likely it could still get down to about half an hour if properly planned. A pro of this option would be that its pricing would function just as other parts of DART do, being more accessible to the public to use without having to pay for a possibly overpriced HSR ticket between the cities. Also, in taking inspiration from NYC's local vs. express model, this line could very well include other local stops and schedules | Do not send response requested. |

| | | | | | | to connect those whose communities the line is bound to pass through--a great way to gain support for the project from those who might otherwise try to derail it for not getting any direct benefits from it. I know this was long, so thank you for looking into these concerns and considering them for this. I would love to see something succeed to better connect the two cities, but I worry studying for a plan for the overhyped tube-train may be a waste of money when more available, more reliable, and overall better solutions exist. | |

I am pleased to hear about the plan to build some sort of high speed transportation and when I heard the I-30 corridor would be the best choice it occurred to me that the piece of land on which the Drury Hotel was supposed to be built would be an excellent choice for a hub. I would appreciate it if you would put that on your radar, as it doesn't seem the hotel will come on board. Thank you. G. Fallavollita | Respond to me by email requested. | 18 | 11/01/2021 | Jay Lee | 76005 | Other | Online - not collected at meeting, general comment form | As a resident of nearby location, I am concerning potential noise of this project. I live in the north edge of Viridian community and currently suffer from train horn noise (i.e. calloway cemetery rd crossroad). I would like to know if this project will have any positive or negative impact on the noise level. | Respond to me by email requested. Based on the Phase 1 recommendations, the proposed corridor for the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections project would follow I-30 not the TRE corridor. | 20 | 11/02/2021 | Rita Beving | 75212 | Alignments and Right of Way | Online - not collected at meeting, general comment form | If you need to go through underserved neighborhoods, go underground. Do not use a condemnation on poor residents because it is the path of least resistance. They are the least likely to find affordable homes. I would like to know how many residences are affected along the chosen route. | Respond to me by email requested. The number of residences that would be affected is not currently known. Based on the Phase 1 recommendations, the proposed corridor for the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections project would follow I-30. Using the existing I-30 corridor would help minimize impacts to private properties. During Phase 2 of the project, a more detailed design and federal environmental document will be developed and will identify which private parcels would be directly and indirectly impacted. The environmental document will analyze impacts to both residences and low-income and minority populations. |

Hello and welcome to the North Central Texas Council of Governments Open House for the Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study.

Hola y bienvenido a la casa abierta del North Central Texas Council of Governments para el estudio de las conexiones de transporte de alta velocidad de Dallas a Fort Worth.

Slide 2

(Project Background: leave up for a moment, and go ahead and move forward)

Slide 3

The study area is located between SH 121 and SH 183 to the north, I-35E to the east, Downtown Fort Worth to the west, and US Highway 287 and SH 303 to the south. That's over 230 square miles!

Esta zona está delimitada generalmente por la autopista estatal 121, autopista estatal 183, hacia el norte, autopista interestatal 35e hacia el este, el centro de Fort Worth hacia el oeste, la autopista estado unidense 287, y la autopista estado unidense 303 hacia el sur. ¡Eso es más de 230 millas cuadradas!

Slide 4

Our primary objectives of this study are to evaluate high-speed transportation options between Downtown Dallas and Downtown Fort Worth. This includes analyzing both alignment and transportation mode options to:

- Connect Dallas-Fort Worth to other proposed high-performance passenger systems in the state such as the Texas-Oklahoma Passenger Rail Study, following the I-35 corridor, and the Dallas to Houston High-Speed Rail Project, and
- To enhance and connect the DFW regional transportation system

We also are seeking to obtain federal environmental approval of the viable alternative design and implement the project.

El objetivo principal del proyecto es evaluar las opciones de tecnología de transporte de alta velocidad entre el centro de Dallas y el centro de Fort Worth. Esto incluye analizar tanto las opciones de alineación y modo de transporte entre las dos ciudades.

- El objetivo incluye encontrar formas de conectar la región de Dallas-Fort Worth con otros sistemas de pasajero de alto rendimiento propuestos en Texas, así como el estudio Texas-Oklahoma passenger rail study, que sigue generalmente el corredor de la carretera interestatal 35, y el proyecto de ferrocarril de alta velocidad de Dallas a Houston.
- Además, el proyecto investigará formas de mejorar las conexiones con los sistemas de transporte regional, incluyendo las redes de automóvil, autobús, trenes, bicicletas, y peatones.

Un objetivo adicional es obtener aprobación ambiental federal para diseñar e implementar el proyecto.

Slide 5

The Texas Triangle Megaregion is made up of several large metropolitan areas along the I-35, I-10, and I-45 corridors including Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Austin, and San Antonio. With the state's five largest cities, this area is home to the majority of the state's population. High-speed transportation is optimal for connecting these adjacent metropolitan areas within the megaregion due to distance and travel time needed for commercial air travel.

La necesidad de conectividad con otras regiones metropolitanas se enfoca en la megaregión del triángulo de Texas, como se muestra aquí. El triángulo de Texas esta formado por varias grandes regiones metropolitanas incluyendo Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Austin y San Antonio. El transporte de alta velocidad es óptimo para conectar las grandes regiones metropolitanas dentro de una megaregión debido a las distancias y al tiempo de viaje adicional que se necesita para las aeronaves comerciales.

Slide 6

With all of the expected growth in the Dallas-Fort Worth region and within the Texas Triangle, faster and more abundant travel choices are needed. Additional travel choices will increase connectivity to, from, and within the North Texas region and will lessen the demand on the region's roadways. This will also allow for more reliable travel times and better air quality.

Con todo el crecimiento esperado de la población en la región de Dallas-Fort Worth y dentro del triángulo de Texas, y los retrasos previstos en el tráfico causados por la congestión, se necesitan más opciones de viaje y más rápidas. Las opciones de viaje adicionales aumentarán la conectividad hacia, desde y dentro de la región de Dallas-Fort Worth y disminuirán la demanda en las carreteras de la región. Las opciones adicionales de viaje también permitirán tiempos de viaje más fiables y conducirán a una mejor calidad del aire dentro de la región.

Slide 7

(Project Overview: leave up for a moment, and go ahead and move forward)

Slide 8

The Dallas-Fort Worth High-Speed Transportation Connections Study is divided into two phases. The first phase analyzed all reasonable alternatives for alignments and travel technologies. The second phase will include an engineering and environmental analysis as prescribed by the National Environmental Policy Act. This consists of conceptual and preliminary engineering tasks and public engagement events. As always, questions and comments are welcome throughout the entire project.

El estudio de conexiones de alta velocidad de Dallas a Fort Worth se divide en dos fases. Actualmente estamos en la primera fase. El objetivo de la primera fase es de analizar todas las alternativas razonables en cuanto la alineación y la tecnología de viaje. Esta primera fase también se ha incluido la investigación sobre las tecnologías de transporte de alta velocidad existentes y emergentes. La segunda fase avanzará las recomendaciones de la primera fase a través de un análisis de ingeniería y medioambiental como prescribe la Ley Nacional de Política Pública Ambiental de los Estados Unidos. La segunda fase incluirá tareas de ingeniería conceptual y preliminar, así como como planes de gestión financiera y de proyectos, concluyendo con una decisión del gobierno federal sobre los próximos pasos del proyecto.

Slide 9

(Screening process: leave up for a moment, and go ahead and move forward)

Slide 10

In Phase 1, the project team used a 3-level screening process to narrow down the initial vast number of possible options to a select few. The process, depicted on this graphic, began with identifying all reasonable alternatives. Next, the first level of evaluation for the alternatives determined whether or not the alternative met the project purpose and need. Of the initial 43 alignments and 5 technologies evaluated in Level 1, 23 alignments and 4 technologies proceeded to the second level of evaluation. Level 2 Screening Evaluation focused on identifying any major flaws which may preclude the alternative from being built. Of these alternatives, 10 alignments and 3 technologies advanced to Level 3, which involves a more detailed evaluation of the alternatives. As we advance the project to Phase 2, we are evaluating 3 alignments and 2 technologies as we move forward with drafting an environmental document.

En la primera fase, el equipo del proyecto ha utilizando un proceso de detección de tres niveles para reducir el enorme número inicial de opciones posibles a unas pocas. El proceso se representa en este gráfico, comenzó con la identificación de todas las alternativas razonables. El primer nivel de evaluación de las alternativas determinó si la alternativa cumplía o no con el propósito y la necesidad del proyecto de las 43 alineaciones y cinco tecnologías iniciales evaluadas en el nivel uno, 23 alineaciones y cuatro tecnologías pasaron al segundo nivel de evaluación. La evaluación del segundo nivel se centró en la identificación de cualquier defecto importante que pudiera impedir la construcción de la alternativa. De estas alternativas, 10 alineaciones y tres tecnologías pasaron al nivel tres, que implica una evaluación más detallada de las alternativas. El equipo del proyecto está completando este paso y necesitamos su ayuda. Mientras discutimos los resultados preliminares del tercer nivel de detección por favor tómese el tiempo necesario para revisar los resultados y aportar sus ideas y comentarios. La información obtenida será muy útil para que el equipo del proyecto haga recomendaciones sobre un número limitado de alternativas que pasen a la segunda fase del estudio.

Slide 11

Using previous transportation studies that examined corridors between Dallas and Fort Worth, the project team identified all reasonable alignments and corridors to analyze. In general, the project team identified alignments and corridors along existing transportation routes as much as possible to minimize the need to acquire additional property. Also, using existing transportation corridors minimizes impacts to homes and businesses. Each alignment and corridor option will connect the Central Station in Downtown Fort Worth to the proposed High-Speed Rail station in Downtown Dallas. In all, 43 distinct alignments and corridors were identified for study.

Utilizando estudios de transporte anteriores donde se examinaron los corredores entre Dallas y Fort Worth, el equipo del proyecto identifico muchas alineaciones y corredores posibles para analizar. In general, el equipo del proyecto identifico alineaciones y corredores a lo largo de las rutas de transporte existentes en la medida posible para minimizar la necesidad de adquirir propiedades adicionales. Además, el uso de los corredores de transporte existentes minimizaría los impactos en los hogares y empresas. Cada opción de alineación y corredor conectará la estación central del centro de Fort Worth con la estación de tren de alta velocidad propuesta en el centro de Dallas. En total, se han identificado cuarenta y tres alineaciones y corredores distintos para su estudio.

Slide 12

The initial 43 distinct alignments and corridors evaluated in the first level of screening were grouped into five families of options. These five families shown on this map are generally identified as the Trinity Railway Express alignments in purple, the Trinity River alignments in gold, the I-30 alignments in dark blue, the SH 180 alignments — which are very near the existing Union Pacific railroad alignment — in red and the SH 303 alignments in light blue.

Las cuarenta y tres alineaciones y corredores iniciales se agruparon en cinco familias de opciones. Estas cinco familias se identifican generalmente como las alineaciones de ferrocarril Trinity Express en morado, las alineaciones Trinity River en color dorado, las alineaciones del interestatal 30 en azul oscuro, las alineaciones de la autopista estatal 180, que están muy cerca de la alineación de ferrocarril Union Pacific — en color rojo y las alineaciones de la carretera autopista estatal tres cero tres en color azul claro.

Slide 13

This map shows the final alignment options passing through Phase 1 that were analyzed throughout the 3-level screening process, focusing on an I-30 alignment option. I will pause for you to view the map.

Este mapa muestra las opciones de alineación finales que pasan por la Fase 1 que se analizaron a lo largo del proceso de selección de 3 niveles, enfocándose en una opción de alineación I-30. Haré una pausa por un momento para que revisen este mapa.

Slide 14

Several high-speed transportation technologies and modes of travel were examined for their use to meet the region's travel needs. These included conventional passenger rail trains; higher-speed trains, which are faster than conventional trains, but slower than high-speed trains; high-speed rail trains, which are the passenger trains proposed for the Dallas to Houston system; magnetic levitation, or Maglev, train technology; hyperloop technology, which incorporates a passenger or cargo pod moving in a near-vacuum tube; and other emerging high-speed transportation technologies.

En esta diapositiva se representan gráficamente los cinco modos o tecnologías de transporte iniciales considerados para este estudio. Estos modos iniciales de viaje incluyen trenes convencionales para pasajeros; los trenes de mayor velocidad que son más rápidos que los trenes convencionales, pero más despacio que los trenes de alta velocidad; los trenes ferroviarios de alta velocidad son los trenes de pasajeros propuestos para el sistema de Dallas a Houston; una tecnología de trenes de levitación magnética, o maglev para abreviar, la tecnología de hyperloop se incorpora una cápsula de pasajeros o de carga que se mueve en un tubo casi al vacío. Y otras tecnologías emergentes de transporte de alta velocidad.

Slide 15

Throughout the Phase 1 screening process, we eliminated several modes in each level of screening. The final two recommended modes of transportation moving to Phase 2 are high-speed rail and hyperloop.

A lo largo del proceso de selección de la Fase 1, eliminamos varios modos en cada nivel de selección. Los dos últimos modos de transporte recomendados que se trasladan a la Fase 2 son el tren de alta velocidad y el hyperloop.

Our project team is wrapping-up Phase 1 as we move forward with the recommendations approved by the Regional Transportation Council. We are hosting open houses in Fort Worth, Arlington, Grand Prairie, and Dallas before we initiate Phase 2. We anticipate Phase 2 to last approximately two years. During this process, we will draft an environmental document in accordance with NEPA; start preliminary engineering; draft financial and project management plans; and continue with public, stakeholder, and agency outreach.

Nuestro equipo del proyecto ya esta terminando con fase 1 mientras seguimos adelante con las recomendaciones aprobadas por el Consejo de Transporte Regional. Vamos a organizar casas abiertas en Fort Worth, Arlington, Grand Prairie, y Dallas, antes de que iniciamos con fase 2. Anticipamos que fase 2 dura aproximadamente 2 años. Durante este proceso, vamos a desarrollar un documento medioambiental de acuerdo con NEPA; empezaremos ingeniería preliminar, desarrollaremos planes financieros y administrativos de proyecto, y continuaremos con participación de la pública, partes interesadas, y agencias.

MINORITY AND LOW INCOME ANALYSIS

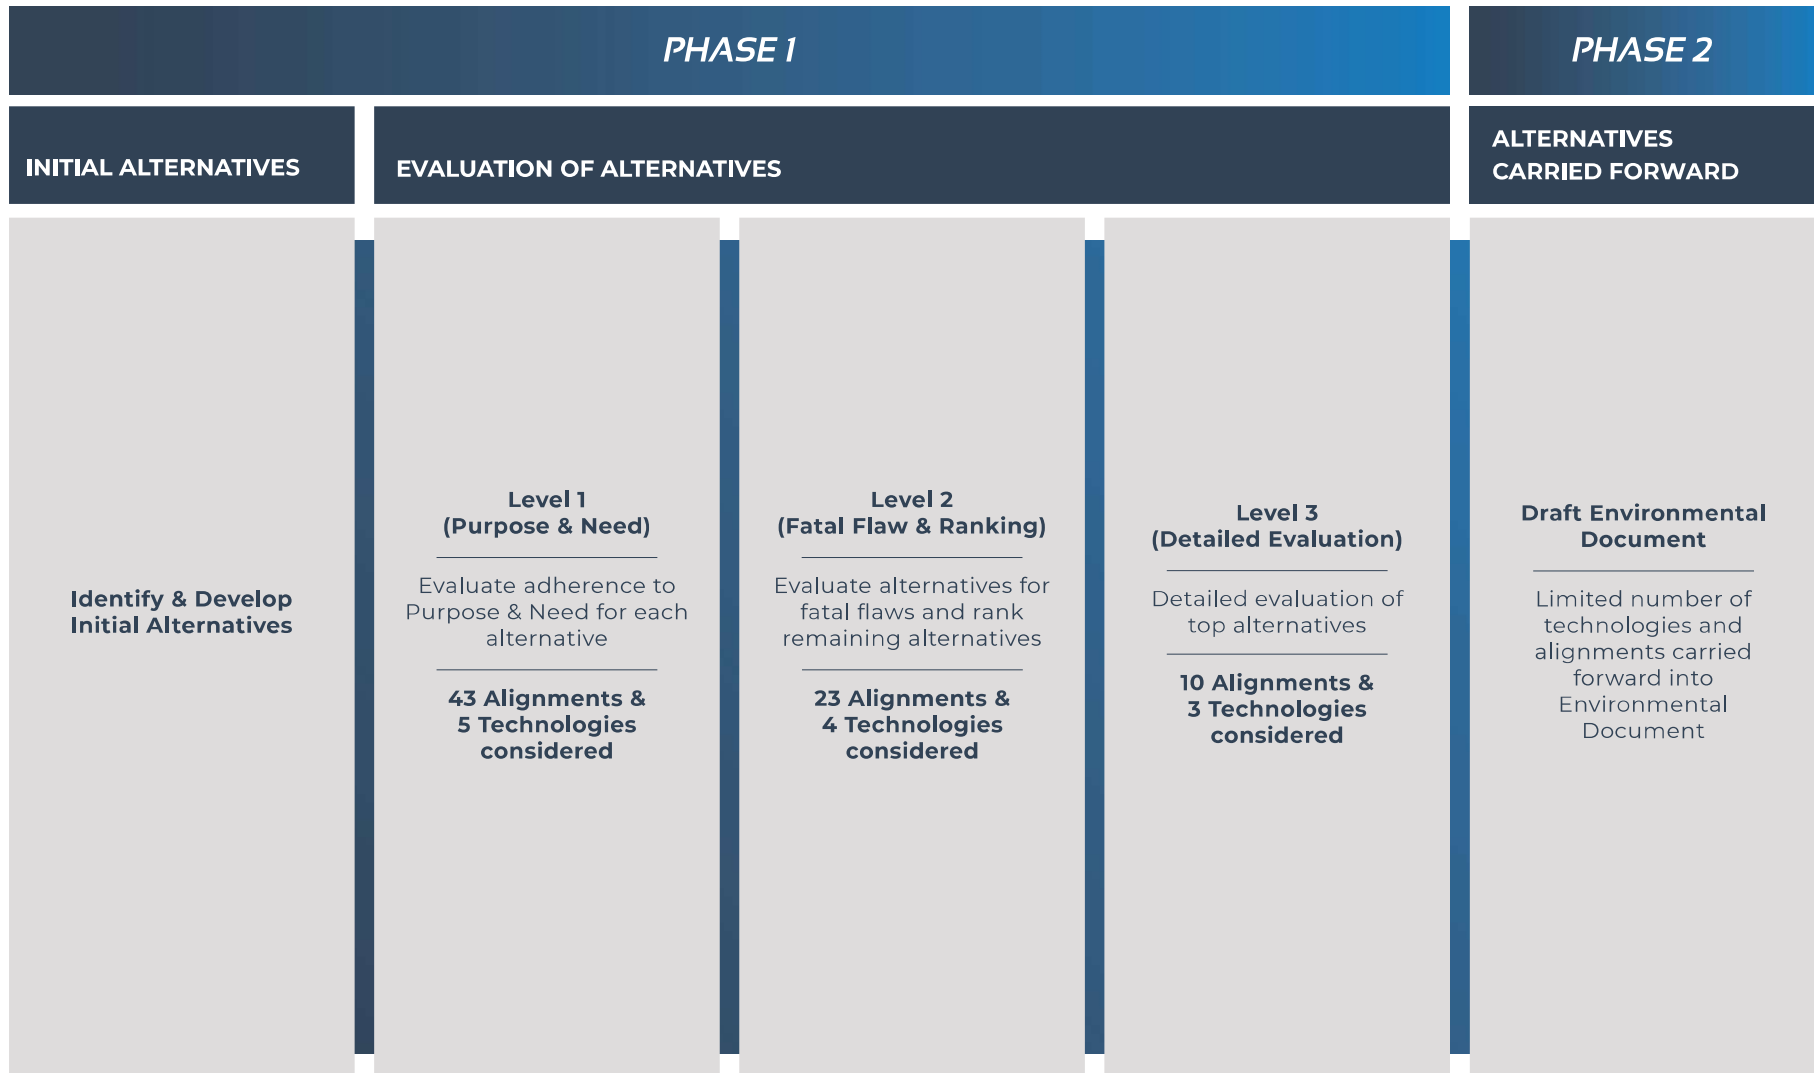

| Environmental Justice | Measurements | ACTIONS TAKEN: |
| | Number of census block groups with above average Environmental Justice Index (Low-income and Minority Populations) that intersect the 250-foot buffer. | |
| Methodology | A buffer of 250-feet in each direction from the alignment centerline was used. Census block groups that intersect the 250-foot buffer were considered. Environmental Justice parcel data was provided by NCTCOG for the DFHSTC study area. The percentages calculated from the parcel data reveal an average of 19% of the regional population is considered low-income and an average of 53% are considered minority in the regional population. | |

ACTIONS TAKEN:

Stakeholder interviews were conducted with agencies and individuals with links to environmental justice communities. Virtual public meeting presentations were recorded in English and Spanish. Presentations and handouts were translated to Spanish and posted on the project website. Meeting notices included an option to provide an interpreter upon request with advance notice.
