Here's a sample energy-saving plan for the best thermostat setting during the summer.
• If you're away from home for extended periods, leave the thermostat at 88 degrees for maximum savings and minimal usage.
• While you're home, move the thermostat to a more comfortable 78 degrees.
• During sleeping hours, change the temperature to 82 degrees for at least eight hours.

Ozone is predicted to be at Level Orange in the Dallas-Fort Worth area on June 20, 2019. On Ozone Action Days you can reduce ozone-forming emissions by implementing clean air strategies. Here are some great examples of things you can do to help improve air quality:

- Carpool or vanpool
- Bike or walk instead of driving
- Take mass transit such as DART... See More

DFW OZONE ALERT

The Air Quality Index is ORANGE

Orange ozone days are unhealthy for sensitive groups which are people with lung diseases (such as asthma), older adults, children & teenagers, and people who are active outdoors.

Sensitive groups should:

- Schedule outdoor activities in the morning when ozone is lower.
- Take more breaks, do less intense activities when outside.
- Watch for symptoms such as coughing or shortness of breath.
- Plan indoor activities.
- Follow your asthma action plans and keep medicine handy.

Air is an Air Quality Index alert. When ozone levels exceed the Air Quality Index, Air Quality Index, you are advised when the Air Quality Index is in the orange range. When the Air Quality Index is in the orange range, you should limit your outdoor activities. Contact us for more information.

Happy #CleanAirActionDay! Did you know that Denton County is a nonattainment area? This means our ground-level ozone violates federal standards, which is bad news for your health.

According to NCTCOG, about 44% of emissions come from on-road vehicles, including cars and trucks. The most impactful thing you can do to improve our air quality is to drive less: bike or walk for short trips, use #DCTA buses and trains, or carpool.
