| 12/2/19| !Image | Happy National Mutt Day! No matter what breed or mix your dog is, they all poo just the same. Poop left behind can pollute our waterways, putting other animals and the community at risk for diseases.
Be a res*paw*ible pet owner and scoop the poop!

Have you ever heard of Parvovirus? It’s a resilient and contagious disease that affects dogs. The disease can be spread through the interaction with an infected dog, public water bowls, used bedding, and dog feces. This disease can remain infectious on the ground for up to six months if dog waste is not picked up right away.
